

The 2007 Special Olympics World Summer Games (Chinese: 2007年世界夏季特殊奥林匹克运动会; pinyin: 2007 Nián shìjiè xiàjì tèshū àolínpǐkè yùndònghuì) were held in Shanghai, China.

Venues

A select list of venues used during the games:

Shanghai Pudong Swimming Arena

Shanghai Stadium

Shanghai Indoor Stadium

Fudan University

Qizhong Forest Sports City Arena

Events

Aquatics

Athletics

Badminton

Basketball

Bocce

Bowling

Cycling

Equestrian

Floor hockey

Football

Golf

Gymnastics

Judo

Kayaking

Powerlifting

Roller skating

Sailing

Softball

Table tennis

Team handball

Tennis

Volleyball

Cricket

Dragon boat

Dragon Lion

MATP

Young Athletes introduction

Concluding its pilot run in 2006, The Special Olympics officially introduced Young Athletes, a sports program for children aged 2–7 with intellectual disabilities. It was designed to get the children exposed and interested in sports before they are eligible to compete in the Special Olympics. It was tested in 11 other countries and over 10,000 children participated.

Revenue and expenses

The Games made a total of $101,663,833 in revenue, gains, and other financial support. It was a $16,898,416 increase compared to the year before. Total expenses for the year were $101,010,125, another increase from 2006, this time worth $19,841,738.

Founder receives award

Special Olympics founder, Eunice Kennedy Shriver was awarded with the Minerva Award for Lifetime Achievement two weeks after the closing ceremony on October 23. She won the award for her contributions not only to the Special Olympics, but for efforts to help people with disabilities. The award is named after the Roman goddess Minerva and serves as a way to honor women who have sparked change in their communities, states, and nations.

See also

2008 Summer Olympics

2009 Summer Deaflympics

References

External links

2007 Summer Special Olympics official site