

The Government Securities Act, 2006 is a legislation of the Parliament of India, which aims to introduce various improvements in the government securities market and the management of government securities by the Reserve Bank of India (RBI).

History

The Public Debt Act, 1944 was an act which provided a legal framework for the issuance and servicing of government securities in India. It was considered outdated, and the Government Securities Act, 2006 was introduced to replace it. The Act oversees government securities and their management by the RBI. The second clause of Section 2 defines government securities as securities issued by the central or a state government for the purpose of raising a public loan.

See also

Banking in India

Public debt

Banking Regulation Act, 1949

References

Further reading

"FAQs: The Government Securities Act, 2006 and The Government Securities Regulations, 2007". Reserve Bank of India. Archived from the original on 19 February 2015.