

This is a list of some of the prominent U.S. citizens who are known to have been put under surveillance by the federal government of the United States.

Activists

Helen Keller

Alice Lee Jemison

Martin Luther King Jr.

Businesspersons

Bernard Baruch

Howard Hughes

Journalists

Margaret Bourke-White, photojournalist for Life magazine

Art Buchwald, a columnist for The Washington Post

David Halberstam, a Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist, author, and historian

Ernest Hemingway, winner of the 1954 Nobel Prize in Literature

Norman Mailer, novelist, columnist and The Village Voice co-founder

Tom Wicker, a columnist for The New York Times

Politicians

Congress

Sen. Barry Goldwater

Sen. Frank Church

Sen. Howard Baker

Sen. Strom Thurmond

Supreme Court

Associate Justice William O. Douglas

White House

First Lady Eleanor Roosevelt

Science and philosophy

Albert Einstein

Howard Zinn

Noam Chomsky

Edward Said

Sports and entertainment

Actors and actresses

Jean Seberg

Marilyn Monroe

Marlene Dietrich

Athletes

Muhammad Ali

Composers

Aaron Copland

Jazz musicians

Duke Ellington

Frank Sinatra

Louis Armstrong

Nat King Cole

Other

Robert Hanssen

See also

Mass surveillance in the United States

== References ==